Brexit week.

Sterling has recovered from a politically driven sell-off after the Prime Minister got backing on the plan to leave the European Union. Shortly after the agreement there were several ministers who resigned, there is also talk of a vote of no confidence in the PM, if that is triggered, and the PM can't muster at least fifty percent support from her party, then the PM is out, the party then have 14 days to choose a new leader or face an early election. Sterling is in for some volatility.
